Peck, the aged real-estate dealer found

Layburn declared that Kehoe paid no at-

are striking. The "Sherman-Johnston Convention," by which name the negotiations for peace between Generals Sherman and hnston, near the close of the civil war, were known, is the subject of a paper by Jacob D Cox. The short stories of the number are by Lloyd Osbourne, and Arthur Colton. An editorial on the subject of "Teutonizing in Education" points out a danger in the tendency to adopt the German system of school instruction. So many articles relating to China are appearing in print that the cautious reader has learned to look at them warily before beginning their perusal, having found that some are neither entertaining nor instructive. They need have no hesitation in regard to the opening paper in the October "China's Holy Land," by Ernest von Hesse-Wartegg. He describes a tour to a part of China which has seldom been visited by white men, having been considered sacred by the natives for over four thousand years, and has much to tell that is new and interesting. The particular purpose of his tour was to visit the tomb of Confucius, but incidentally he saw many other historic monuments and points of interest, among the latter the holy mountain, Tai-Schan, which is the Mecca of China, having been visited by countless numbers of pilgrims. Ascent to its summit is made by a flight of six thousand stone steps, an undertaking which the traveler plished in six hours. The magazine contains also three other papers on Chinese matters, all worth reading. Sheridan P. Read, formerly United States consul at Tien-Tsin, talks about the Chinese as business men; Roymn Hitchcock describes the character of Chinese education, and Bishop Potter writes of "Chinese Traits and Western Blunders." In addition the magazire contains "A Plea for Fair Treatment." by Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister at Washington. He urges deliberation and care in determining upon the character of the settlement to be demanded of China by the powers. Another feature of this is an attractively illustrated arti-"American Miniature Painting." William Mason continues his "Memories of a Musical Life;" John Morley's "Oliver Cromwell" is brought to a conclusion, and weir Mitchell's "Dr. North and His Friends" also ends. There is a paper by Theodore Roosevelt on "Civic Helpfulness. which, the editor explains in a footnote, was written months before the author's nomination for the vice presidency. Several

Professor Shaler's new book, "The Individual: a Study of Life and Death." is

He approaches the question of death, as he says n his preface, from the point of view of natural history, and calls his book a protest against the idea that a human being is something apart from its fellows; that it is born into this world and dies out of it into the loneliness of a supernatural realm.

BEDFORD, Ind., Sept. 30.-The public declaration of James C. Carlton that he of President McKinley, has been a blow to Lawrence county Democracy. Mr. Carlton has stood for half a century a leading figure in Democratic councils, and his splendid personal character and great ability makes him a prime factor in Second district politics. He is of the old school of Democrats, of the McDonald, Niblack, Voorhees type, but he has kept abreast of the times and few men are better informed or about Oct. 17 with Senator Fairbanks than he. He is an experienced newspaper as the attraction. The gathering will be life of the sailor based on Mr. Bullen's own long experience. The Frederick A. man and is active and vigorous. stands squarely for the administration of President McKinley. When asked to state for publication some of his reasons for declaring against the so-called Democracy of the present day Mr. Carlton gave the question of finances his most earnest attention. He had had a very interesting experience while travel-'Fate the Fiddler," as distinctively a ing in Mexico a few years ago, when the "free and unlimited coinage of silver" was not an issue between the Republican and Democratic parties. "This," said he, "was in the fall and winter of 1894-5. I was employed by a surgical instrument manufacturing firm in the United States to go to Mexico and sell its product, it being supposed by the firm that the knowledge I had acquired of the country as a volunteer during the Mexican war of 1846-8, and the limited knowledge I then had of the Spanish language, would especially qualify me for the situation. I had previously traveled for a New York house which carried the same line. I spent several months in Mexico and learned much concerning the great civil and religious reforms which have taken place in that country within the past forty years. And, as the money question was constantly before me, I became

But they do have unlimited coinage, and by paying the coinage fee one can have all the silver bullion he may carry to the mint coined into Mexican dollars. When coined the dollar is worth only one ounce of refined silver bullion in Mexico or anywhere else in the world. The Mexican dollar is not backed The words, 'Republica Mexicana,' on one side of the Mexican dottar and the Mexiit equivalent to gold at the ratio of 16 to 1. But under our monetary system our silver dollar is convertible into gold practically at the ratio of 16 to 1, so that at home or abroad it has a recognized value at that ratio, compared with gold, as have our greenbacks and national bank paper." Asked if he observed any evidences of prosperity in that country since the close the Mexican war, Mr. Carlton said: "There are many signs of progress and stability in Mexico, but such progress has been brought about, not because of, but in spite of, limited coinage. It is entirely brave statesmen as Juarez. Diaz and others in separating church from state and enforcing laws with a mailed hand. I cannot in that manner tell you half the things concerning these matters I learned while traveling in that country, but I see that the Mexicans are getting along under the new order of things so well that I am informed President Diaz's next coup d'etat will be to place Mexican fignances on a gold basis similar to that of the United

Mr. Carlton was asked what his views were on imperialism and expansion. He replied in his characteristic firmness: "Imperialism, so called, is a fake and a goblin, used by Bryan to catch gudgeons and votes. Concerning expansion, allow me to say that we have already expanded, so far as former Spanish territory is concerned. and I am decidedly in favor of doing the best we can to give the people of our newly acquired islands such territorial government as they show themselves capable of conducting under the Constitution and the laws of Congress, after they (the Filipinos) have laid down their arms and submitted to the authority of the United States. As to the annexation of Cuba, or any other territory in the western hemisphere, I am willing to leave that to future generations. In other words, I don't believe in crossing a bridge till you come

"My first experience in expansion occurred at a very early age. As a member of a Democratic glee club when I was twelve years old I assisted in singing James K. Polk into the presidential chair. The battlecry of the campaign on the part of the Democrats was, 'Oregon and Texas, fifty-four, forty, or fight,' meaning that we were in favor of the annexation of Texas. and if England did not concede our western boundary to Oregon along the line of latitude fifty-four degrees and forty minutes we would fight for it. Well, Texas was annexed and the Mexican army under General Arista crossed the Rio Grande into Texas territory in 1846. General Taylor drove them back into Mexico and invaded that country. The next year (1847) General Scott organized another invading army and entered Mexico via Vera Cruz, and captured the capital in August and September. "Summing up the record of the country on the question of expansion," said he, "It will be found that every acre of territory acquired either by conquest or purchase was under a Democratic President, with the exception of the Gadsden purhase, a patch of land on the northern order of Mexico, not as large as the ling seamen. GERMAN-AMERICANS FOR M'KINLEY

Interesting Incident of Senator Fairbanks's Visit to Jeffersonville. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., Sept. 30.-The widespread reports of the Democrats that vicinity would repudiate McKinleyism at the polls this fall, and the charge that George Pfau, sr., George Pfau, jr., and George H. Holzbog, three of the most prominent Germans in the city, had deserted the Republican party were disproved last Friday night in a way that caused the Democrats to wish that they had never started the rumors. After the blg Fairbanks meeting one hundred of the most substantial Germans in the city met and, headed by Messrs. Pfau and Holzbog, marched to the home of Capt. E. L. Dorsey, where Senator Fairbanks was being entertained. Each man shook the hand of the senator and assured him they would support the Republican ticket. Philip J. Strack, candidate for sheriff, introduced Mr. Fairbanks in a neat speech and the latter responded in a feeling manner, stating that he could not be more honored than by the visit of this delegation of respected Germans. At the conclusion of his talk three cheers for Republicanism was suggested, and this was given with a vim. The Germans here are not the least concerned over the cry of "imperialism."

Captain Hatfield on his arrival here reported that his ship, the Nonpareil, sailed from New York Sept. 9 bound for Sourabaya, Java, with a full cargo of coal oil. Two days after leaving Sandy Hook a strong southwest gale sprang up and soon increased in force and hauled to westsouthwest and assumed the proportions of a hurricane. All of the sails were suddenly furled except two lower topsails, which were set to steady the vessel, as there was an exceedingly high sea running. The seas boarded the vessel frequently, tons of water falling upon the deck, doing considerable damage to the fittings and finally throwing the vessel on her beam ends. The Nonparell remained in this position the 13th, at noon and then moderated, but the sea continued to run very high. The large spar, which had been secured to eye bolts in the deck on the port side, broke adrift, wrenching the eye bolts out of the deck. All these damages opened up the decks and let a lot of water into the hold. Conditions continued to grow worse for several days, and on Monday, Sept. 17, the wind increased to a fresh gale and the ship was under water on the port side. The gale became so violent the crew was set to work throwing over the cargo. ### Activity of Union Men May Defeat Aims of Operators.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 30.-A prominent coal operator who is in touch with the negotiations now going on looking to a settlement of the miners' strike said tonight that on Saturday night it looked very favorable for a settlement, but it does not look so favorable to-night. The activity of the United Mine Workers in the Schuylkill region to-day has half way put a damper on the negotiations, The committee of operators here learn that more strenuous efforts were put forth by the United Mine Workers to-day to bring men out in the Schuylkill region than at any time since the strike began. The operator quoted says this does not show a good spirit on the part of the men who are di-recting the strike. The report given out that the contem-plated offer of the companies calls for a 5 per cent. reduction in powder is erroneous. It any reduction is made it will be uniform, and it is thought the price will be fixed at $1.50 a keg instead of $2.75, as is now paid in the Wyoming and Lackawanna regions. ### Some Miners May Accept.

SHAMOKIN, Pa., Sept. 30 .- Notices were posted here to-day by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Company to the effect that, beginning with to-morrow, an advance of 10 per cent. in the net wages of all men and boys would obtain. Whil some strikers said they were ready to go to work in the morning, others hold that it would not be wise to act until President Mitchell has issued official notice as to the course the men should pursue. Much interest is manifested as to whether the Reading collieries will be able to work to-morrow irrespective of the question of the recognition of the Mine Workers' Union by the mine operators.

Will Ship Bituminous Coal. READING, Pa., Sept. 30 .- For the first time in years, practically no coal will come over the Reading Railway to-morrow for tidewater. Everything at the mines was cleaned up to-day, and to-morrow's product will not be sent out until early Tuesda morning. The company is preparing for extraordinary heavy shipments of the bitu-minous coal to tidewater from West Vir-

QUARREL ON A TRAIN. Colored Porter Shoots a Pullman Couductor on the Florida Express.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. ' 30 .- Julius Washington, of New York, a colored porter on the Florida express on the Pennsylvania Raliroad, to-day shot and seriously wounded A. E. Hindle, the Pullman conductor of the train, whose home is in this city. The shooting occurred just after the train had left Chester, Pa., this afternoon, for this city and was the result of the conductor and the porter had been prominent physicians in the State. The quarreling all the way from Washington, and after leaving Chester the dispute again arose over a ticket. Hindle is said to have told the porter that he was done with him and when the train reached Philadelphia he would have him put off. Washington is said to have threatened to kill him and after some further argument he drew a pistol. The conductor ran through the car, but was shot while in the narrow passageway adjoining the drawing room of the car. The negro again fired, but without effect. The shot that struck Hindle lodged in the back near the lungs. The porter was overpowered, and word was sent to this city, where he was taken into custody and locked up. The company physician made an examination of Hindle's wound, and expressed the opinion that he would probably recover. The Pullman car in charge of Conductor Hindle was attached to the train at Memphis.

HERO HONORED.

(CONCLUDED FROM FIRST PAGE.) waited on as a matter of course even under the hottest fire. His kitmutgar, or native butler, brought him his meals regularly in the battery at Delhi; his grooms waited with his horse whenever ordered, regardless of the storm of shot and shell. In the middle of the fierce onslaught of the Afghans upon Sherpur, his bath attendant came to him in the thick of the fight and touched him quietly on the shoulder, with the simple words, "Bath ready;" that was his duty-what was expected of him, just as he was sure his master expected to wash even in the middle of a battle. The most touching devotion to his person was shown in the Afghan campaign by his native orderlies, of whom he had two Sikhs, two Ghoorkas and two Pathans. They never left him; two or more followed him wherever he went, night or day; they had always the best news of what was in the wind, and if there was any dangerous business afoot they turned out and kept close to their beloved general wherever he might go. If he got into a tight place. they were there to keep him from harm if they could; and in one fight a tall Sikh stood in front of him with arms out-stretched to shelter his small chief, and receive any builet that might have endangered Roberts's life. Throughout his whole service Lord Rob-erts has ever identified himself with his troops. His first thought has been for them, and for their comfort and well-be-ing. As a result he is the hero of every Tommy Atkins."

VANDERBILT DELAYED.

He Did Not Ride from Newport to New York in Twelve Hours.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 .- William K. Vanderbilt, jr., who left Newport at 6:30 o'clock Saturday morning with his racing automobile, in an effort to make a record of about twelve hours to New York, arrived at the Harlem-river bridge at 10:45 o'clock to-night. On the machine with Mr. Vanderbilt were two men. The machine had a great headlight, and one man spent all his time blowing his big horn. Mr. Vanderbilt rode on a narrow rear seat. "I left Newport at 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning," said Mr. Vanderbilt. "Got caught in the rain in Connecticut. Got away from Larchment at 8:46 o'clock to-night. I am." That was all he would say. After a delay of one minute and two seconds at the bridge the party raced over the river and down town.
